

A New Course on Classroom Management

“CLASSROOM OF CHOICE: MANAGING THE LEARNING ENVIRONMENT”

3 Semester Hours of Graduate Credit

101 ways to create an orderly, safe, and productive classroom learning environment

This course features Jon Erwin presenting and demonstrating his classroom management concepts and practices as detailed in his book The Classroom of Choice: Giving Students What They Need and Getting What You Want. You will learn how to create a learning environment that supports the class as a whole while meeting the particular needs of individual students. You will also learn how to identify students' internal needs and use that knowledge to customize and manage a classroom that promotes responsible behavior and learning.

IN THIS COURSE, YOU WILL LEARN HOW TO:

-  keep your classroom orderly and running smoothly.
-  use research-based management strategies.
-  build and maintain trusting classroom relationships.
-  boost student self-worth through accomplishment.
-  gain cooperation and prevent discipline problems.

This course is based on a practical application of Dr. William Glasser's choice theory ideas in the inclusive classroom. Using course content, you will create, implement, and evaluate classroom lessons and activities that will appeal to and engage students whose knowledge, skills, needs, and temperaments vary greatly.
